

PRELIMINARY IMAGE EVALUATION (PIE) RECERTIFICATION PROCESS (SEPTEMBER 2024)

Examination

Once the candidate has successfully completed the examination, then an initial PIE certification certificate will be issued that has an expiry of three years.

There is no direct “clinical” component like other ASMIRT certification examinations.

Consequently, to re-certify and obtain a new PIE certificate after three years, candidates will need to undertake the following:

1. Provision of an employer’s letter detailing that the applicant has spent a significant portion of their three years working in both the emergency department environment and the ICU / HDU environment, or in a department where there is a requirement for imaging evaluation and commenting.
2. Has undertaken (and demonstrated/evidenced) a minimum of ten (10) hours per year of continuing professional development (CPD) education directly related to Preliminary Imaging Evaluation (PIE) scope of practice.
